RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 96 pages. LC Number: KF27 . P8964 2007n OCLC Number: (OCoLC)371102411 Subject: Historic buildings -- Remodeling for other use -- Washington (D. C. ). Excerpt: . . . 5 Finally, St. Elizabeths is a National Historic Landmark and the development of DHS headquarters there offers a unique opportunity to restore many of the historic features of the campus that have badly deteriorated over time. So, making this project a success is important for our Nation as well as for the National Capital Region. Regarding the National Historic Landmark, just as a reference, I am meeting tomorrow afternoon with Dick Moe, who is President of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, to further dialogue with the leadership of the historic preservation community. I would like to share with you today, based on discussions with the Committee and counsel, some examples of GSAs success in working with local communities on a large scale like St. Elizabeths and the economic benefit that accrues to areas. You talked at great length about the Southeast Federal Center and your leadership in that legislation. Through GSAs Public Buildings Services Good Neighbor Pro-gram, we seek to basically conduct our real estate activities and decisions to, number one, obviously, meet our client agency's needs, and we are doing a lot more in terms of long term planning about space consolidation and efficiency of housing of those clients but also to support, which is the topic of this panel, the communities that we serve and the communities in which these jobs are located and the economic impact and other impositions such as transportation are felt. We engaged with local communities early in the process, soliciting public input - this panel today will help in that regard -...
