Balancing the potential economic impacts of security enhancements with the benefits of such measures is a difficult challenge. Securing the nations mass transit and passenger rail systems is a shared Multiple Stakeholders responsibility requiring coordinated action on the part of federal, state, Share Responsibility for and local governments; the private sector; and passengers who ride these Securing Mass Transit and systems. Since the September 11, 2001 attacks, the role of federal agencies Passenger Rail Systems in securing the nations transportation systems has continued to evolve. In th response to the September 11 terrorist attacks, Congress passed the Aviation and Transportation Security Act of 2001, which created TSA within DOT and conferred to the agency broad responsibility for overseeing the security of all modes of transportation, including mass 12 transit and passenger rail. In 2002, Congress passed the Homeland Security Act, which established DHS, transferred TSA from DOT to DHS, and assigned DHS responsibility for protecting the nation...
